

Dear Citizens,

The owners of the Columbia Manufacturing Corporation, headquartered in Los Angeles, California, have announced the company will be closing the two locations in Corsicana. According to the owners, the Columbia workforce has been downsized over time to fewer than 35 employees at the two locations. The local facility manufactured doors and windows. The reasons given for the closing is a loss of market share, increased competition from other manufacturers, and decreased product demand.

Regards,

Chuck McClanahan
